Smash Toward Rabaul, Buin Held Likely After Major Victories.

(By United Press)

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA — (By Courier) — American and Australian forces penetrated today to a point only 500 yards from the Japanese air field at Buna.

Another American force drove within a mile of Buna before running into heavy machine gun fire.

The air field apparently still was serviceable. The forces trying to take it met heavy machine gun opposition.

Operations in the Buna triangle have assumed the character of a perimeter offense, with the Japanese attacked from three directions.

The immediate Allied objective was the Buna airdrome. One American force approached along the coast, meeting resistance just south of Cape Endaiadere. Another was on the outskirts of the airdrome. Meanwhile, Australians descending the Kokoda track from the mountain area reached Soputa, native village, six miles from Buna.

Last night's report revealed that Allied patrols from Wairopi, pursuing Japanese detachments fleeing to the north, finally caught up with them Wednesday night, killing 24 and dispersing another 30 amid great confusion

Allied Forces Drive on Last Nazi Positions

British Eighth Army Nears Decisive Battle With Africa Corps as U. S., French Advance In Tunisia; Mediterranean Mined.

BULLETIN

STOCKHOLM — (UP) — The newspaper Allehanda reported from Berlin today that tension in German "is mounting hourly" regarding the outcome of the battle in Tunisia.

(By United Press)

LONDON—The final phase of the battle of North Africa appeared to be approaching today with Allied columns driving against the small but strongly held Axis bridgehead in Tunisia and the Imperial Eighth army driving toward a decisive battle with the remnants of the Afrika Korps at El Agheila.

Allied commanders believed the time was nearing to force the Axis into "an African Dunkirk."

In the Mediterranean the admiralty reported that it had taken steps to sever Axis supply and transport communications with Spain and the Balearic islands by sowing mines over a wide area.

Reports from African field commanders indicated the showdown for the Axis was drawing near in both Tunisia and Libya.

The Allied columns in Tunisia were roughly 25 miles from both Bizerte and Tunis and closing in rapidly. Another small Nazi garrison was believed encircled at Gabes on the Tunisia east coast.

The Germans still were rushing in guns, tanks and men across the 90 miles from Sicily and it was expected that a hard fight would be required to drive them from their bridgehead. However, the British, American and French forces in Tunisia were reported considerably superior to those of the Axis

In the east the Allied offensive was moving with equal speed. The British advance guards were fighting the rearguard of Marshal Erwin Rommel at Agedabia and were moving toward El Agheila 70 miles farther southwest where it was expected the Nazis would attempt a stand.

Bengasi, capital of Cyrenaica, was entered by the British without a single shot being fired. Cairo reports said

Warning that all Mediterranean waters outside Spanish territorial limits were now dangerous, the admiralty said that any ship which

Expect 6,000 In City Will Seek Extra Gas

Registrations for A Books Fall 3,000 Short of Estimate; Schedule to Apply For Supplemental Supply Complete.

More than 6,000 Mansfield motorists are expected to register next week for supplemental gas rations, on the basis of 9,244 registrations during the last three days for basic mileage gasoline ration "A" books.

Official figures on the three-day registration were not available at noon today by public school officials and teachers who handled the registration at 10 elementary school sites were compiling definite statistics to be released later in the day Present estimates indicate the city registration fell short of original estimates by 3,000.

Nelson Neff, newly appointed chief clerk of the Richland War Price and Rationing board, said estimates by the Office of Price Administration indicate that two-thirds of those who obtain A books also apply for supplemental rations

Neff has submitted his resignation as a teacher at Johnny Appleseed Junior high school, to become effective Nov. 30 but will devote his time outside of classroom duties through next week to his tasks at the rationing board offices His appointment, to succeed James Bailey, who resigned yesterday, was confirmed by John Sexton, field organizer for the state OPA headquarters.

No definite figures were available at noon on the registration at Richland county village and rural schools but indications were that many passenger car owners who obtained license plates this year had failed to Coffee Sales End at Midnight Till Rationing Starts.

Your coffee, if any, won't necessarily be cold but the nation's supply will be frozen at midnight tonight for one week to permit retail dealers of Mansfield and elsewhere to stock their shelves for the rationing program which starts Nov. 29.

Thereafter for the duration the ration will be one pound every five weeks for each person over 15 years of age—or approximately a cup a day.

In Mansfield and Richland county, institutional users will register next week at the county war price and rationing board offices, 43 North Mulberry street. This group includes hospitals, sanitariums, jails, infirmaries and such, but does not include hotels, restaurants or domestic consumers, according to Nelson Neff, chief clerk of the rationing board.

Domestic consumers will be issued coffee on sugar ration book coupons, the coupons being taken from the last page

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The White House said today that Rear Admiral William H Standley, ambassador to Moscow, will return to his post within a month, but first he will spend some time with his family on the Pacific coast.

Two Ohio Hunters Killed, One Hurt Near Loudonville

BULLETIN

Richard Gerich, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Gerich, Troy township, was in a critical condition in General hospital this afternoon after he was accidentally shot in the head by his brother, Alvin, 14, while hunting on their father's farm. The brother fired a .22 calibre rifle through a hollow log into which his brother was peering, Deputy Sheriff Glenn Freeman said.

Hunting season got under way in Richland county yesterday without a mishap although two boys died in Ohio accidents and four other persons were injured, one near Loudonville.

Richland county nimrods described the opening day as a big success, most of them getting the limit of pheasants or rabbits. The majority of the birds were shot in northwestern Ohio counties, mecca for pheasant hunters

Rabbits were reported plentiful in Richland county and emptybagged hunters were scarce last night. Pheasants, however, were not so easy to find in the Mansfield area, it was said.

Victims of accidents yesterday

OK'S SCHETTLER AS MUNY JUDGE

Republican Committee Also Endorses F. R. Zellner For Post of Bailiff.

H. H Schettler, Mansfield attorney, was endorsed last night by the Richland county Republican executive committee for municipal judge to succeed Judge G E Kalbfleisch who will occupy the common pleas bench after next Feb 9

The committee, in a session at the courthouse, gave Fred R. Zellner, former Democratic clerk of courts, its endorsement for municipal court bailiff to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of August Schultz Schettler, former city solicitor and acting municipal judge at various times in recent years, won the party's endorsement over Attorney Lydon Beam, only other candidate mentioned for the post. Appointment of Judge Kalbfleisch's successor will be made by Gov. John W. Bricker, who presumably will name Schettler.

The bailiff will be appointed by Judge Kalbfleisch before he goes to the county court.

Schettler received the committee's unanimous endorsement on the second ballot, Chairman Ralph Hardy said. In the initial vote, 15 members balloted for Schettler and eight for Beam

In endorsing Zellner for municipal court bailiff, the G.O.P. committee continued a custom established several years ago by R. E Hutchison when he was municipal judge. A Democrat, he appointed a Republican to the bailiff's post.

Zellner served six years as county clerk of courts, leaving the office last year when Howard Wenning was elected to succeed him.

Glenn Swanger of Shiloh, a Republican, last night received the county committee's approval for the sales tax inspector's job which will be vacated next week by John Hess, recently inducted into the army.

Police Narrow Quiz of Poison Suspects to 50 In Oregon.

SALEM, Ore.—(UP)—Capt Walter Lansing of the state police concentrated today on a group of 50 insane workers in his effort to solve the mysterious "mass murder" of 47 inmates of the state hospital for the insane.

"Learning the truth from this group," he said, "is like trying to pick up a piece of quicksilver with your fingers."

The workers were all "trusties" who helped in or had access to the kitchen where by a means unknown a deadly mineral poison was added to scrambled eggs fed to 460 inmates Only six inmates remained in critical condition today and hospital authorities did not expect more than one or two more deaths."

FREEZE PART OF STORAGE BUTTER

Officials Set Aside Supply For Soldiers, Housewives Hunt Substitutes.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—To keep Johnny Doughboy from being fed dry bread while fighting far away, the folks at home may soon have to spread their butter thin—or use some substitute.

Frozen in more ways than one, 40 per cent of the nation's cold-stored butter supply today was set aside for fighting men and the lease-lend program under terms of a war production board order

And housewives started eyeing such table-fat substitutes as margerine and peanut butter, for the 'temporary' wording of the order failed to ease the threat of eventual shortage

However, WPB officials planned to supplant the freeze as quickly as possible with a limitation order which would cut consumption about 10 per cent—or two pounds per person a year.

They added that the shortage might not materially affect the retail market before January, and that rationing might not be necessary.

Because of the shortage, attributed to seasonal production slumps and increasing civilian purchasing power, the army and navy have found it increasingly difficult to get sufficient supplies, WPA said At a time when improvement in the shipping situation made it opportune to ship more butter to the men overseas, many vessels with space for it were forced to sail with other cargo.

The order did not affect retail stocks on hand.

HEAVIEST: Turin Ablaze After Air Raid, Populace Flees Genoa

(By International News Service)

LONDON—Italy was subjected to its heaviest aerial bombardment of the war during the night when Royal Air Force planes streaked across the Alps to blast the great industrial city of Turin, it was officially announced today.

The attack by a strong force of bombers was heavy and concentrated, the air ministry said, and many large fires were started. Due to the smoke from the flames observation of the results of the raid were difficult

(An Italian communique today admitted "very great damage" to Turin in the night's raid The check of casualties so far totalled 29 dead and 120 injured, the communique said

(The British planes came over in waves according to the communique and dropped bombs and incendiaries in considerable quantity."

(The Italian announcement confirmed the air ministry statement that only three British planes were lost.)

Huge Stirling, Halifax, Lancaster and Wellington bombers crashed two-ton block-buster bombs down upon Turin, site of numerous heavy war industries, including the large Fiat airplane works.

The assault was the second against Turin in three nights and the fourth on northern Italy within a week

"Turin was bombed in good weather last night," an air ministry communique said

It was understood that the raid was highly successful and that

RATIO: Japs Pay 8-to1 for Every American Flier Downed

(By International News Service)

SAN FRANCISCO—For every American flier brought down by the Japs in the Solomon islands fighting the Americans are bringing down eight Japanese, was the report today of four young marine flyers who returned from the Pacific battle zones

The eight to one ratio was reported by Captain Elmer G Glidden of West Roxbury, Mass., and Second Lieutenants Henry W. Wise, Shamrock, Tex., Dale Leslie, Madison Fla., and Forest L. Martin of Memphis, Tenn.

Casually relating their battle experiences, the four aviators told of the desperate attempts by the Japanese to soften up American forces holding Guadalcanal.

A Japanese battleship, they said, suddenly appeared over the horizon one day and threw 14-inch shells at the Americans. At the same time six Jap transports loaded with troops attempted to effect a landing.

"They did effect a landing—for a while," Capt. Glidden said. "But the nine tanks which they brought ashore were destroyed by our artillery and we kicked them off again."

Captain Glidden, as pilot of a dive bomber, was one of the American aviators who got into the air and helped bring about the destruction of the battleship, five or six cruisers and destroyers and the transports.

The four aviators said that of the American pilots the Japs are successful in downing, 70 per cent survive and return to their outfits to fight again. The flyers are en route to the marine base at San Diego where they hope to receive leave to visit their families.

You Can't Print That!

(A compendium of tales that can't be told with names because they're too true to print. If you find in the many resemblance to actual persons, living or dead — you've probably guessed right!)

Here's a tale that concerns a pretty little strip-teaser called Dolly and a society boy named John.

John and Dolly met, and fell in love as quickly and as thoroughly as if she'd been a waitress in a beanery and he a defense worker.

Kilgallen

But of course, his Park avenue family objected and, looking at it honestly, Dolly saw their point; so because she loved him very much and wanted to be someone his family would respect and he'd be proud of, she quit burlesque.

She gave up her $200 a week and took an office job at $20 per. But she was happier than she'd ever been.

Until, of course, the inevitable happened.

John strolled backstage at a burlesque show (he can't seem to keep away from them) one night, met a strip teaser named Annabella and fell madly in love with her blond hair, her spangles and her "glamour."

He just doesn't care what his family thinks now. He's going to get married without their permission—to Annabella.

But you can't print that. Dolly's friends in burlesque circles think she switched from stripping to-typing because she was very intelligent—you wouldn't want to prove to them that she was really very dumb.

Several months ago a well known Hollywood writer sold a script to one of the major movie companies for the trifling pittance of 75 grand—and it was reported at the time that on his way out of the office after clinching the deal, the scenarist casually inferred that he had another idea which might sell in synopsis form for $15,000.

Whereupon the bewitched movie moguls nodded frantically, and the deal was closed on the spot.

As I say, you've probably heard that story. What wasn't revealed, however, was the fact that the two pages of copy, which were peddled at $7,500 a leaf, were strictly out of the writer's bureau drawer.

They had been rejected by a weekly New York magazine, three years ago.

But you can't print that. The writer wouldn't mind, but it would embarrass the magazine fearfully.

Leland is potentially a rich man, and certainly one of the most brilliant on Broadway. To date, however, the only talent he has managed to exploit is his uncanny knack of winding up with the short end of everything.

By occupation he's a play agent, with the meals lean and few. By heredity he is one of the owners of Labrador—fisheries, forests, minerals and farms—which an ancestor left to him, and to this day a battery of Canadian lawyers is suing on his behalf in proceedings that seem to go on interminably and fruitlessly.

Leland was a dancer in vaudeville, plays the piano by ear, and can rattle off the tunes from every musical comedy for years back. While playing them he can describe the scene where they originated, the name of the star who sang them, and who the singer's heart interest was at the time.

That's how much he loves the theater—and how well he knows it.

After he became a play broker, he grew very friendly with an office boy at Erlanger's, and used to write to him and advise him when the boy was away at camp. The boy wrote a play, and dedicated it to Leland; it became one of the all time comedy hits of Broadway history.

When he became an agent and talent scout, Leland roomed with Archie Leach. Archie went to Hollywood after a while and became a sensational success as Cary Grant.

It just seems that everybody who ever knows Leland keeps running into horseshoes and four-leaf clovers, but Leland has never tripped over a rabbit's foot. His last protege was a famous child star—and typical of his luck, she was annexed by another agent as soon as she arrived in California.

Of course, you can't print that—not with Leland's real name. But maybe you ought to. Maybe if you did somebody would notice him—somebody like Lady Luck, for instance.

HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD — These uncertain times: Humphrey Bogart met Irving Rapper on the lot. "Say, are you going to direct Bette Davis' next?" he asked.

Coons

"I'll know about that tomorrow," said Irving.

"Are you going in the army?"

"I'll know about that tomorrow."

"Say — I hear you're about to be married. How about it?"

Irving was disappearing around a corner. " . . . about that tomorrow, too," the words came back.

Humphrey Bogart reached a conclusion. "One way or another," he mused, "that young man is going to have a future."

There are things that Alyce May may forget, but not that one Christmas that Lana Turner took her shopping. Lana took Alyce May into a furrier's, and said, "Alyce, will you try on this coat?"

Alyce said "Sure," because Alyce is Lana's stand-in, and off duty one of her best friends. She tried on the coat, a mink, and modeled it while Lana inspected.

"Like it?" said Lana.

"It's—it's beautiful," said Alyce May.

"It's yours," said Lana.

Alyce May to this day hasn't quite recovered. The tale is told here because, ere long, it will be long in a catalogue of nostalgic items about a Hollywood that is no more. Tomorrow's Lanas may be as fond of tomorrow's Alyce Mays, but the wherewithal for spontaneous largesse of the sort will not be there. Taxes and limited incomes and all that, you know.

Alyce May has been with Lana five years, as stand-in, secretary of sorts, and companion. She was a stock girl at Warner's when Lana, fresh from being discovered sipping a soda at a drugstore, was making her movie debut in "They Won't Forget." Alyce worked with Lana in a drugstore scene, and later at Metro got the stand-in job. This is by way of being a milestone, for in "Nothing Ventured" Lana again is involved in drugstores and sodas.

Alyce goes to New York when Lana goes, runs interference for her when the autograph-hunters attack en masse, and periodically dyes her hair on short notice from the boss. Lana has been blonde, red-haired, honey blonde, brown-haired and platinum blonde, and every tint that Lana takes is Alyce's too. Lana telephones the news, and Alyce says, "Omigod, another color?" but obediently dyes to match. One of the compensations of her job is that, wearing Lana's sizes, Alyce inherits the complete Turner wardrobe.

Alyce, too, is asked for autographs. People think she's Alice Faye.

French-Axis Military Pact Near, Report

WPB EXPERTS TO GO INTO ARMY IN NEW SET-UP

Will Be Assigned to Dayton As Part of Aircraft Centralizing Plan.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The new war production board set-up for more centralized control of aircraft production is expected to result in the commissioning of some WPB civilian experts into the army air forces for assignment to Wright field at Dayton, O.

Details of the reorganization still are being worked out, but are expected to be clarified soon. WPB and war department sources meantime gave the following general picture as to how the plan will work:

The new aircraft production board, headed by Charles E. Wilson, former president of General Electric Co., will make the basic decisions on quantities and types of planes to be made for the army and navy after reviewing the recommendations on those services. It thus will bring army and navy procurement into closer coordination and take over the top production scheduling authority hitherto exercised more directly by the services.

However, a considerable amount of detailed work hitherto done by the WPB aircraft branch will be turned over the services, which will carry out the basic decisions made by the new board. In this connection the services are expected to take over a number of WPB production employes. Some of these will be commissioned and some will remain in civilian status.

Many of those absorbed by the army air forces will be assigned to duty at the materiel center at Wright field. However, the new four-man board headed by Wilson, or its immediate staff, will remain in Washington.

It was indicated at the war department that there would be little change in the great bulk of the procurement and experimental work carried on at Wright field. The new system primarily involves the top planning of the national airplane production program, both army and navy, as a whole.

LEARN CIVICS AT FIRST HAND

Pupils at Newton Falls Schools Know About Water Supply —It's Too Small.

(By Associated Press)

WARREN — School pupils at nearby Newton Falls are getting a first-hand civics lesson on the problems of public water supply.

Because of a water shortage and the accompanying low pressure in afternoon hours, the three Newton Falls schools with a total enrollment of about 1,600 will operate only in the morning hours next week, on order of the county health department. The order may be extended if the water pressure does not improve.

The village is drilling additional wells to relieve the strain on the municipal system, caused by a sharp rise in population from about 2,500 to between 4,000 and 5,000 since the building of the Ravenna ordnance plant.

A large new well had been expected to remedy the situation considerably, but it went dry just before being placed in operation.

Among recent additions to Newton Falls' size were a 350-unit housing project and a camp of 237 trailers. Another camp of 500 three-room trailers is ready for occupancy but cannot be opened until sufficient water is available.

SUPREME COURT TO GET TEST CASE ON SHARE-RIDE LIABILITY

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND—A test case on an automobile driver's liability under Ohio law for injuries to share-the-ride passengers, a question of interest to mileage-rationed motorists, will be taken to the Ohio supreme court within a week.

After an appellate court ruling favorable to a driver, Attorney M. L. Bernsteen said he was preparing to take the case to the higher court, and planned to ask for an advancement so that a decision could be handed down as soon as possible.

Bernsteen, appointed by the Cleveland bar association to represent a passenger in a suit filed here, declared the government mileage rationing program, with its share-the-ride requirements for cars to which supplementary rations are allotted, would be affected by the outcome of the suit.

Appellate Judges Lee E. Skeel and Daniel E. Morgan upheld a lower court ruling, declaring the decision was justified by the war emergency. Presiding Appellate Judge P. L. A. Leighley dissented, contending share-the-ride passengers were in reality commercial passengers to whom the driver was responsible in the event of injury, as in the case of a public carrier. Written opinions will be delivered next week.

The original ruling was made by Chief Justice Homer G. Powell of common pleas court, who based it on an Ohio law known as the "guest statute," which relieves a private driver of liability.

He held that except in rare cases where "wilful and wanton negligence" was proved, the driver could no be held liable, but was a "host" to the passenger "guests" within the meaning of the Ohio law.

No actual injury is involved in the test case.

PLANS SET FOR LIQUIDATION

Colonial Finance Stockholders to Meet Dec. 1.

Plans for the liquidation of the Colonial Finance company with a branch office in Mansfield were underway today as stockholders of the company were notified to attend a meeting in Lima, Dec. 1, to authorize liquidation of the assets.

The local office along with many other Ohio offices of the Capitol Finance company was recently sold to the Capitol Loan company of Columbus and will continue in operation here as the Colonial Finance company, H. A. Westervelt, local manager announced.

Following a "tempest in a teapot" protest lodged with Mayor W. J. Locke and Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger, Captain Lonnie J. Steele will continue as captain of No. 4 engine house on Newman street. Recently Seeburger assigned the newly-appointed Captain Lee Harley to No. 4 station, transferring Steele to No. 3. However, during his five years at the Newman street station, Steele has become a successful leader and adviser of Boy Scouts and other youths of the neighborhood. Apprised of the transfer, mothers of Newman street school children marched on the City Hall for a frontal attack on Mayor Locke's office. Locke ducked the fire, leaving Seeburger to bear the brunt of the verbal barrage. So tomorrow Steele returns to No. 4 and Harley assumes command of No. 3 station.

Howie Cowger, Sparrows Point, Md., is a trusting soul and he gets lonesome in strange places. Last night he told police that a new-found friend proved false indeed. When Howie alighted from a transcontinental bus at the Greyhound station for a 30-minute rest stop he was approached by a friendly-acting stranger. Soon after their somewhat informal meeting the stranger asked to borrow a dollar and when Howie extracted a $50 roll from a pocket the stranger grabbed the whole jackpot and fled.

LAVAL READY TO SIGN UP WITH BERLIN

Confers With Nazi Delegate, Proclaims Hatred For Democracies In Talk.

(By United Press)

LONDON—Pierre Laval, newly created by the Nazis as puppet dictator of France, was reported on the verge of concluding a military alliance between continental France and Germany today.

Reliable reports from Madrid said Laval was conferring with Otto Abetz, Nazi delegate to Paris, and was expected soon to leave for Berlin to sign a treaty joining France, militarily and economically, with the Axis.

Those reports were strengthened by Laval's speech to the French people last night in which he proclaimed his admiration for the Nazis, his hate for the democracies and a promise that "volunteer legions" would avenge the "insults" the pro-Nazis of France had received, presumably from French patriots.

"A legion of volunteers is rising at this moment who will go to North Africa to fight and whom we are not going to stop, to give the answer to the insult inflicted upon France," the United Press listening post heard Laval say.

The Germans Trans-Ocean agency quoted him: "Never so long as I have a say in the matter will democracy return to France."

He said Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, in making him dictator of German-occupied France had given him "the heaviest task a man can carry on his shoulders."

Laval tried to revive the Jewish-Communist bogey, with which the Nazis try to frighten their own people and other Europeans. If the Allies win, he said, France will be ruled by a "Jewish-Communist alliance."

Observers regarded it as a German speech in the French language.

German newspaper reaching neutral territory indicated unmistakably what is expected of Laval, but said his renovated cabinet was not yet satisfactory to the Nazis, inasmuch as it does not include Jacques Doriot, Jacques Benoist-Mechin and Marcel Deat, arch-collaborationists.

In this connection, the London Daily Express reported from the French frontier that Doriot had been taken to a Paris hospital with four broken ribs and injuries that may cause him to lose his left eye. He met French patriots swinging bludgeons as he left a meeting of his Fascist Popular party with a bodyguard.

successes in the Solomons and on New Guinea.

Such an offensive was envisaged today by military experts who hold that the islands provide ideal advance bases from which the United Nations could tighten a vise on some of Japan's most important positions in that area.

The American hold on the southeastern Solomons has been greatly strengthened by the shattering defeat of the Japanese fleet last week end and increasing successes of U. S. marines and army troops on Guadalcanal. The area would make an ideal take-off point for a drive northwestward through the rest of the Solomons where the Japanese have numerous bases.

On New Guinea, Allied forces are pressing their attacks on the main Jap bases with heavy fighting now in progress in the Gona-Buna area. An Allied victory would deprive the enemy of an excellent port and threaten their two remaining bases at nearby Salamau and Lae.

Elimination of Japan's hold on New Guinea would free the Allies for an eventual drive on Rabaul, key Jap position on New Britain island to the northeastward. An important port and air center, it is believed to be the chief operations base for most of the bomber raids against Guadalcanal.

In the northwestern Solomons, the Japanese have an important naval operating center at Buin on the south coast of Bougainville island and other bases in the Shortland area, on Gizo island and at Rekata bay on Santa Isabel island.

Secretry of the Navy Frank Knox revised Japanese losses in the Solomons naval battle upward to 28 ships sunk and 10 damaged and said America's hold on Guadalcanal is "now very secure." The naval victory, in a large measure, was responsible for this, but the marines and army troops on the island have added their bit to bring that situation about.

The final tally sheet of enemy losses now reads:

Sunk (28 ships) — Two battleships (one possibly a heavy cruiser; 6 large cruisers, 2 light cruisers, 6 destroyers, 8 transports and 4 cargo transports.

Damaged (10 ships)—Two battleships, one cruiser and 7 destroyers.

American losses remained at two light cruisers and six destroyers sunk. The number damaged was not disclosed although at least one, the heavy cruiser, San Francisco, is known to have been hit.

Knox also revealed that the American naval forces included two battleships but their names were not disclosed. The Japanese used three and possibly four battleships in the action.

STAMPS ARRIVE

Postoffice Forced to Turn 50 Away Because of Rush.

Mansfield postoffice was stocked with auto use tax stamps again today after being forced to turn at least 50 customers away from the windows yesterday after the November supply had been exhausted by the rush inspired by the gasoline registration.

Motorists must carry the serial number of their use tax stamp upon their mileage gasoline books in order to obtain gas and the many of them applying for stamps this week indicated that they had either lost a previously purchased stamp or had not driven their car this year, postal authorities said.

The postoffice supply of November use tax stamps, based on the number issued in October, was depleted by Thursday night, according to Postmaster Herman E. Homberger. Additional stamps did not arrive until today although they had been ordered from Cleveland Wednesday indicating that the office there was also caught short.

entered them without Allied permission did so at its own risk.

It was announced that mines had been laid in an area extending from the French-Spanish frontier to a point outside the Balearic islands and thence southward to the Algerian coast.

The Allied forces, pressing eastward into Tunisia, were reported to have driven the Germans into one defense perimeter in the Tunis-Bizerte area on the northeast coast and another at Gabes on the east coast.

American and British advance guards were reported to be feeling out the enemy strength at the Bizerte-Tunis perimeter already, preparing for the kill.

Radio Morocco said the Germans had concentrated a great amount of war material on the coast just northwest of Tunis, along the road to Bizerte, apparently planning to make their big stand there, and it was added that a violent battle was expected.

Bomber planes of the Middle Eastern command, supporting the Allied drive into Tunisia, bombed Axis reinforcement airdromes in Sicily Thursday night, a Cairo communique said, and other planes left a 2,000-ton Axis reinforcement ship sinking from bomb and torpedo hits and heavily damaged another.

British heavy bombers based in England made what was said authoritatively to be the heaviest raid of the war on Italy during the night, attacking Tunis for the second time in three nights.

Radio Vichy reported that Benito Mussolini, fearful of an Allied invasion of the Italian coast, had ordered new combat units attached to all coast defense and anti-aircraft batteries in the coastal area.

Radio Morocco at Rabat reported that the reinforced German air force in Tunisia, striving desperately to slow the Allied drive, had attacked Bone, the Allied base on the Algerian coast, and Algiers.

Radio Algiers quoted an American army communique saying that during a German plane attack on Allied posts along the Algeria-Tunisia frontier Wednesday anti-aircraft guns downed four enemy planes and British fighters five. Six British fighters were lost, radio Algiers said.

Though the Germans were understood to have formed a strong defense zone extending out 30 miles from the Tunis-Bizerte area, it was reported that Allied mobile units had penetrated to within 25 miles of the towns from the south.

The fighting French radio Brazzaville reported that the Allies were overrunning all Tunisia except the two defense zones, and it was evident that the Axis forces were definitely and probably finally cut off from Libya, where Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's shattered Afrika Korps remnants were retreating westward before the British Eighth army.

From west of Bizerte to southeast of Tunis, the Germans were indicated to be defending a front of about 100 miles behind which was the northeast corner of Tunisia.

They had been beaten soundly in four small clashes with United States troops, the first between Americans and Germans since the last World war, and in several clashes with the British.

It was reported also that rapidly organizing French troops had thrown back German thrusts along the east coast in the Gulf of Gabes area.

The present situation seemed to be that the Allied army under Lieut. Gen. Kenneth A. N. Anderson and American Maj. Gen. Charles W. Rider was pressing in overwhelming force eastward to invest the Bizerte-Tunis and Gabes defense zones and reduce them at leisure.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1942.

Drive carefully tomorrow—or, come to think of it, why drive at all?

They called Rommel a fox—so the British decided this would be a good time for a fox chase.

It was nice to note the fine spirit of co-operation with which children sacrificed three days of school so that the teachers could take care of the gas rationing registration.

Resign From Disagreeable Jobs

RESIGNATION of James Bailey as chief clerk of the Richland county rationing board, and LeRoy B. Hamilton as director of the rent control set-up in this area, raises an interesting point in connection with public attitude toward persons placed in responsible positions associated with wartime restrictions imposed by the federal government.

Mr. Bailey's first association with the rationing program was in an unpaid capacity and the change to a position which was nominally compensated resulted from a revision of the plan of operation in which he had no voice.

But those who are unpaid ration board workers, as well as Mr. Bailey, have so frequently been subjected to criticism and abuse by persons seeking special favors, and by objectors to the whole rationing program, that their tasks have been made unnecessarily difficult and nerve-racking.

Little wonder that Mr. Bailey reached a point at which he decided, as stated in his letter of resignation, "The load is getting too heavy for me to carry at my age, and consequently I feel that my health comes first."

People are apparently even more "touchy" on the subject of rent control than in the matter of rationing, and it has been the cost of that set-up in this three-county area that has drawn vitriolic criticism, rather than the announced personnel, although it is unlikely that anyone thus appointed would be satisfactory to everybody.

It is not surprising, however, that Mr. Hamilton concluded he didn't care to be the storm center of an agency that is likely to develop more protests, ill-feeling and bitterness than any other governmental action that has yet been taken.

If there is no real need for the costly rent control machinery being set up for this area it would be a good idea to have the plan revamped now—but if it is to go through in the way that has been started the job of director shouldn't be made so disagreeable that no capable person will accept it.

Retail Distribution Also Essential

OFFICIAL prophecy is that 300,000 retail stores face closure during the coming year. This dire prediction may or may not prove true. But it does indicate to some extent the rigors of wartime mechandising.

Retail distribution is one of those industries without which the country cannot get along. Every war worker must be fed, clothed and housed. And it is up to the merchant to do it. His shelves may be bare of many scarce commodities. He may be confused on some of the new and complicated price regulations. He is up against the labor problem. His taxes are skyrocketing. His profit margins are dwindling. The government employs an army of snoopers to catch him in the act of violating regulations. He is the embattled individualist in a war-regimented economy. And yet he must keep going because we cannot get along without him.

Check-up On 'Use Tax' Stamps

SO LITTLE attention had been paid to enforcement of the law requiring display of a federal "use tax" stamp on each automobile that some motorists have been rather shocked to discover that the delayed check-up is being made in connection with gasoline rationing and that the serial number of this stamp is a part of required information on the coupon book which entitles holder to buy four gallons of gasoline a week.

No further punishment is prescribed, it appears, than that persons who failed to pay the $5 "use tax" cannot purchase rationed gas until they buy a stamp.

Motorists who contend that the 35-mile speed limit is in conflict with Ohio state law, which prescribes 50 miles an hour as maximum speed, will also do well to note that 35-mile limit is a federal provision designed to make tires last longer, and that in qualifying for gasoline rationing the agreement was entered into, "I will not drive in excess of 35 miles an hour."

Thinking About World's Future

MASSACHUSETTS has in its constitution a "public policy" provision, whereby the filing of a large enough petition will enable voters to express their opinion on questions of broader application than usual.

One such question up at the recent election called upon the state legislature to request the president and congress to call "a convention of representatives of all free peoples, to frame a federal constitution under which they may unite in a democratic world government." This project was ratified by a three to one vote.

While attainment of this goal is still far away, the war is driving the United Nations into ever closer harmony. Such votes as this show that there is much thought about the future of the world.

Rulers and Their Followers

AS THE STRUGGLE against Napoleon approached its climax, the Allies issued a famous proclamation that they were not warring against the French people, but against Napoleon. It helped to rally against the emperor the submerged hostility to him among the French, and contributed powerfully to his overthrow.

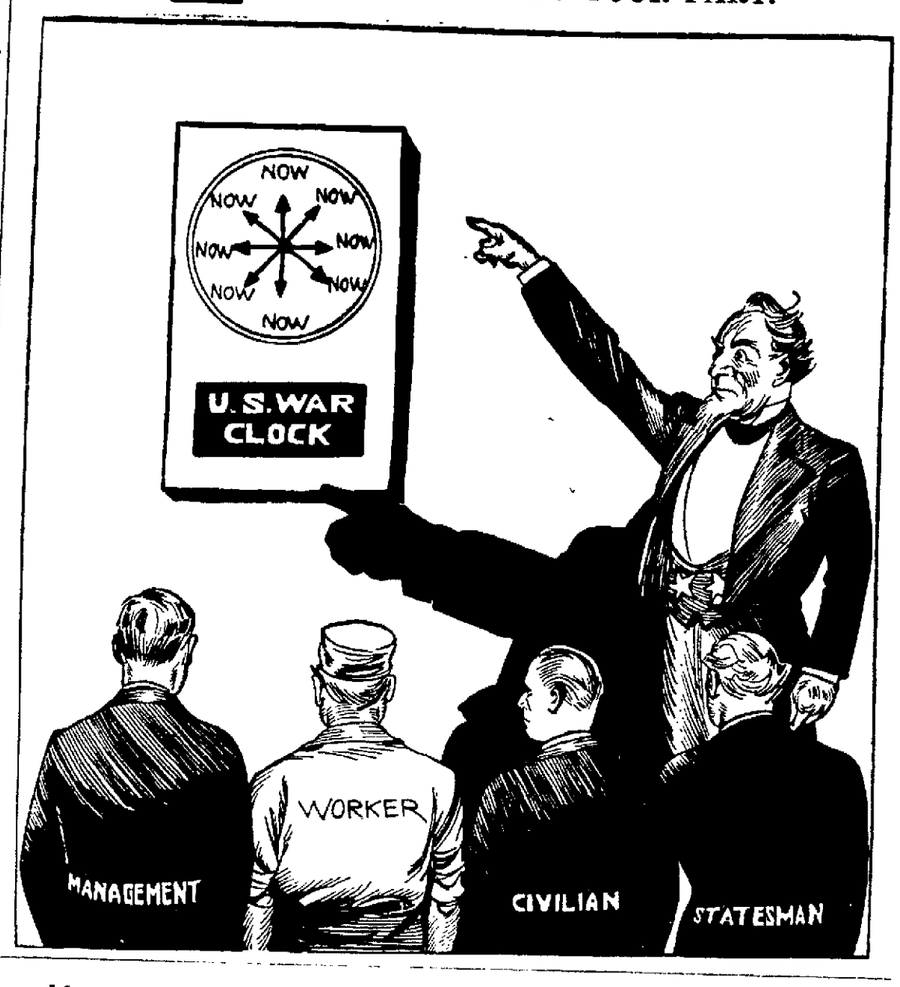
Nearly a quarter of a century ago Woodrow Wilson's words, distinguishing between the German people and their rulers, helped sow unrest among the enemy and, even more than the strokes of Foch, overthrew the kaiser.

Now many wonder whether any such distinction can truthfully be made between Hitler and Mussolini on the one hand, and their more or less willing followers. These have been glad to profit by the booty wrung from conquered nations. Why should they escape penalty for a support whose enthusiasm wanes only with defeat?

And then again, it's usually a blunt person who indulges in sharp criticism.

The coffee shortage is still not convincing.

NOW IS THE TIME TO DO YOUR PART!



Still Another Prosperity Recipe

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Economics Professor Lewis Haney of New York university gives quite an original reason for believing that we'll have very prosperous times after the war.

There are other supposed-to-be experts who make hopeful predictions, but one can't help suspecting that they have their fingers crossed.

They point out that there'll be a tremendously accumulated demand for civilian goods that we can't supply at present, being too busy with war production. There'll be such a demand, all right. There is after every war, for that same identical reason. A demand is no good to business if the desirous folk are too flat broke to foot the bill for the stuff they want. And that's just the shape that war leaves 'em in.

No country, any more than an individual, can thriftily pile up wealth for quite awhile and then destroy it, running frightfully into debt, too, without finding itself badly depleted by the performance. It hardly needs saying that a state of all-around bankruptcy and of national prosperity aren't a bit consistent with one another.

Consequently, when one of these optimistic economists broadcasts a sample of his cheerful post-war anticipations, you can't help wondering if he really has much faith in 'em.

An alternative proposition is that we'll have to start in on a tremendous program of post-war public improvements, railroad building and similar large-scale industrial activities, to take up the slack of unemployment. Ah, but you'll note that reference to "the slack of unemployment!" That doesn't sound so prosperous, does it?

Haney's Cure.

There are cures, though, even for diseases that you can't help catching. Dr. Haney mentions one for the spell of post-war depression, which he recognizes as a probability, but doesn't think will be very bad or last long—not if we take what he considers the proper medicine, as he surmises we'll do, not that it'll be formally prescribed for us, but that our system will so cry out for it that we'll simply grab at it naturally.

Indeed, says the professor, we made our initial grab last election day.

In short, Economist Haney's diagnosis is that abandonment of the New Deal will be sufficiently helpful to us to counteract unfavorable post-war tendencies. And more, too, according to Professor Haney: it'll give up an outright economic fillip. It won't be as effective as it would be if we hadn't had the New Deal to begin with, and then the war on top of it. Nevertheless, the professor Haney: it'll give us an outjection of New Dealerism will land us back into normalcy—plus something of a percentage.

I've referred to Professor Haney's prescription as medicine.

It isn't exactly that. It's more in the nature of abstinence—from New Dealerishness.

The professor rather implies that, in one respect, the New Deal's extinction will result advantageously.

Tendency Apparent.

There was a tendency toward it, before it came into its own, and it was a tendency that worried business and, unconsciously, labor and agriculture. Such is the New York university's teacher's judgment.

The man in the street, avers the prof, is sick of regimentation and bureaucracy and already is scandalized by coming taxation's prospects. He's stuck for taxation, anyhow, but he may be able to modify regimentation and bureaucracy to a modicum.

The prof draws his conclusions from the November election. It isn't a pure matter of guesswork.

The New Deal's fizzled, as per his verdict.

I'm simply quoting him, as an eminent authority.

Listen World!

'Ammunition' Song

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

I'VE GONE ALL OUT for one war song. They're claiming it's named from the shout of a husky chaplain who helped to man a dead gunner's post during the battle of Pearl Harbor, crying, "PRAISE THE LORD AND PASS THE AMMUNITION!"

Whether the chaplain did or didn't, he certainly started a phrase that's sweeping America. And bringing back the spirit that bucked its savage wilderness.

"PRAISE THE LORD AND PASS THE AMMUNITION!"

I don't know what's your recipe for righteousness, but there's mine. Yes, I know there are different formulas. Folks who sit around, praying and singing, waiting for God to hand them salvation on a silver platter—just because they haven't ever busted into jail. Meek mice who have never risked anything, or started anything, and think they should therefore be entitled to an eternity of bliss. But if God favors that kind of a Cream Puff, He can count me off His campaign list. What I like and choose to follow is the stout hearted soldier who shouts:

"PRAISE THE LORD AND PASS THE AMMUNITION!"

I wasn't at Pearl Harbor. I have never been engaged in a major military fracas. But this I know:

No great cause has ever been won unless there was a fighting heart behind it.

You need more than devotion to win any righteous war. You need COMMOTION and plenty of it. You need sweat and tears and blood—as well as the Twenty-Third Psalm. And Faith without Fireworks is phooey.

I repeat—I didn't learn this in war. But I learned it in life, with many an uppercut.

I started life, as most of my generation did, with the notion "be good and you'll be safe." I don't know who started that notion. Certainly not Christ. If ever a man paid dearly for his goodness, He did. But before He paid, He performed. He didn't just sit around muttering prayers. He went into the Temples and larruped the tar out of the chiselers, parasites and racketeers. He "praised the Lord," yes. But he also "passed the ammunition"—and how!

And I'm thinking this nation had better remember that fact—and quick! The greatest hope in human history is Christianity. But nobody is going to get it free. You'll either fight for it or take the count.

Ethically speaking, we're a pretty good nation. Few of us rob or murder or indulge in nefarious practices. So, as a people, we are quite sure that we'll win this war. But we won't! We'll win this war only if and when we "pass the ammunition"—and raise hell with the rats who are opposing us.

There's an old saying, "It isn't enough to be good; you've got to be good for something. And that saying should be on the wall of every home in America today. For we are facing the first real challenge, and the toughest our system of life has ever faced. So far, we've done pretty well by ourselves. We haven't had much to tackle. So we just took it for granted that we were God's little pets.

But God's calling our bluff today. We've got to prove that we have what it takes to carry on His kingdom—or stop kidding. Fine phrases will no longer see us through. There are guns blazing and we must man them—or else! So its:

"Praise the Lord
"And pass the ammunition"
Or take the consequences.

Eating In the Kitchen.

William M. Jeffers, the rubber czar, has a strange fondness for the phrase, "the man who eats in the kitchen." He has defined his political philosophy as the conviction that in any country the balance of power eats in the kitchen. He wrote a letter to the president of the American Red Cross not long ago urging the Red Cross to pay less attention to socialites and more to the man who eats in the kitchen. This week, speaking at the New York Herald Tribune forum, he said he was "profoundly conscious of the economics of the man who eats in the kitchen."

What is there about eating in the kitchen that distinguishes one as a man of special merit? We do not know. Kitchen eaters among our acquaintances are fundamentally no different from anyone else. Personally, we suspect that Jeffers is merely trying to ingratiate himself with what formerly was known as "the common man."—Akron Beacon Journal.

American Navy Wins Round Two In Big Sea Battle With Japanese

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

WHEN the World war ended the experts started writing about the "last great naval battle"—the Battle of Jutland in 1916 in which the British Grand Fleet met the German fleet and established Allied supremacy on the high seas.

Future wars, said the experts, would bring nothing to match Jutland because of the development of new weapons and the disposition of naval commanders to avoid risking their total strength on a single combat.

In this war the premise seemed well taken. Germany's small fleet hid out in northern waters and Italy's fast-footed ships hugged shore.

Then the Japs and the Americans got going. It has been one great series of naval engagements ever since—in some ways, the greatest series of all times.

First, Macassar.

They started it in the Macassar Straits, an indecisive battle although losses were suffered by all parties—Japanese, American, Australian and Dutch. They moved to the Java Seas, where the Americans managed to hold on but the remainder of Dutch naval power in the Pacific was wiped out.

From there on, through the battles of the Coral Seas and Midway, the Americans carried on alone, except for the occasional and limited assistance of the Australians. These were engagements centering around aircraft carriers, symbols of the new phase of sea war, but dangerously vulnerable themselves to air attack.

The U. S. thrust into Guadalcanal late in the summer shifted the scenes. The Solomons are strategic; from this pivot the Japanese fleet could swing on an arc and menace Australia, Hawaii, American bases in the mid-southern Pacific. It was a lodgement from which the Americans must be chased to make the Nipponese position invulnerable, to carry out the program for Pacific domination.

The Build-up.

Bit by bit, the naval strength of both sides was concentrated in the area. There were thrusts and parries with light units, but nothing resembling a full-dress engagement until late last month when the Japs used a heavy force to screen Guadalcanal landing operations. The American force raced to action, sent the Japs back to their bases, but not until more troops had been put ashore on the rocky beaches near Henderson airport.

Almost before the nation had digested the communiques of the October engagement—Round One in the Solomons, in the words of Navy Secretary Knox—came news that another battle was under way. For days the navy withheld word of its progress. The silence was ominous; Australia's Navy Minister Makin added to the tension with the declaration that upon the results of the battle depended Australia's security.

No 'Jutland.'

Then, last week, the navy broke its biggest story to date. In a colossal clash of surface units, the U. S. had sunk 11 Japanese warships—including a battleship and five cruisers—and 12 other vessels including eight transports. Seven other assorted ships had been damaged and Japanese loss of life was estimated at between 20,000 and 40,000. The U. S. lost two cruisers, 6 destroyers.

The Japs had thrown their Sunday punch, and it wasn't enough.

Here was the biggest naval battle since Jutland, and it was not "another Jutland" because its range of consequence remained limited to the Solomons area. Navy men, however, were elated over the result. Not for a while, at least, could Japan be expected to assemble another striking force of such caliber.

Thus ended Round Two of the Solomons, and Secretary Knox warned that Round Three probably will come. But, he added, "We will defeat them . . . I don't know when, or in what action."

At Home

Indestructible Eddie.

One bright day in July, 1937, Amelia Earhart lifted her powerful Lockheed "flying laboratory" off a field at Lae, New Guinea, and headed toward the equator on another leg of a round-the-world flight.

Some time later, in the vicinity of the Howland Islands, she was heard asking a ship for directions.

She never was heard from again, although the navy sent surface ships and planes scouring the area for weeks.

A month ago, America's most famous World war ace, 52-year old Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, was lost "somewhere in the Pacific"—perhaps near the scene of Amelia Earhart's last report. He was in an army plane, with seven other men, on a special mission for the war department. The army and navy searched for almost three weeks without success.

But last week Indestructible Eddie, who had survived dozens of dogfights with German planes and a commercial liner crack-up a couple of years ago, was found bouncing around in a raft in the Pacific by a navy flying boat. Six of the plane's occupants also survived; one died and was buried at sea.

And as if to prove his indestructibility, the navy said Eddie made the trip from rescue scene to land lashed to a wing of the flying boat—there wasn't room aboard for everybody.

Christmas Rush.

Riding the crest of a "defense" boom, Americans last year rang up one of the biggest Christmasses in history. They said, as they jammed the nation's department stores, "You don't know what the situation may be by next Christmas."

Last week the boom was on again. It came earlier, and it promised to be more restrained, but in the great majority of instances there was ample merchandise available. Since last Christmas the manufacture of scores of items has been stopped, and price ceilings have been imposed on virtually every article.

So, while Americans may have a fairly normal Christmas this year, the government sounded a warning note for the months to come. We must face the prospect, said Economic Director James F. Byrnes, of having a great many more commodities rationed.

Rationing Notes.

The OPA cut the allotment of gasoline for motorists in 16 eastern states from 4 gallons per coupon to 3, effective Nov. 22.

The War Labor Board ruled that Christmas bonuses to employes may be continued—but the amounts or percentages must not be increased, and no new bonus plan may be inaugurated.

The WPB started a nation-wide collection of worn silk and nylon stockings, to be rewoven into powder bags for army and navy guns.

The Office of Defense Transportation asked civilians to stay at home over the holidays, to permit the movement of troops and war materials.

Abroad

Progress In Africa.

American soldiers streaming eastward after their easy occupation of French Morocco, joined the British First army in clashes with air-transported German and Italian forces in strategic Tunisia, in what appeared to be the initial development in the deciding phase of the battle for North Africa.

Far off to the east, the powerful British Eighth army continued its pursuit of Marshal Rommel's shattered Afrika Korps, and somewhere between Tunis and Libyan Tripoli, the Axis was expected to make its final, desperate stand—a delaying action at best.

Both the American and British arms of the pincers movement had slowed their pace from the previous week, indicating the problem of supply and extended communications. Similarly, the Germans were compressing their operations into a smaller and smaller area, picking up supply and service garrisons as they retreated, with the possibility that a force of up to 100,000 men might be involved in the Libyan-Tunisian stand.

The Boss Is Back.

When Gen. Douglas MacArthur stepped into a PT boat last spring and headed from Bataan to Australia, he gave up active direction of an army in the field. Last week, for the first time since that day, he was back on fighting ground, supervising active operations against the Japs.

The general took the field at New Guinea as tough American and Australian soldiers pressed their drive against Buna, one of the enemy's three important strongholds along the northern coast. It was a continuation of the relentless advance begun two months ago, when the Aussies went over the Owen Stanley mountains to counterattack.

If the Allies could take the port of Buna, they then would be in a position to drive against Lae and Salamaua, further up the coast. Occupation of these would virtually pass control to the Allies, giving them a whole new coastal front for operations against Japheld islands.

Quotes

A U. S. army private with American task forces in French Morocco: "I don't understand it. . . . All the French people come out to clap and cheer us when we take a town. Nothing's too good for us. But when we start to move on we have to fight like hell again at the next town."

Maj. Gen. George S. Patton, commanding U. S. invasion forces in Africa: "We shall attack and attack until we are exhausted and then we shall attack again."

Health And Diet

Health Questions Are Answered.

—By DR. CLENDENING

J. H. C.:—Is it true that eating coffee grounds or other small things can cause appendicitis?

Answer: No, nothing that is eaten causes appendicitis. About the time of the Chicago World's Fair there was a belief that grape seeds caused appendicitis. This rumor died soon after and I had thought it stayed dead.

S. S.:—Please tell me what are floating opacities of the eye? What effect will they have in the long run on vision?

Answer: Opacities in vision are due to changes in the consistency of the vitreous humour of the posterior chamber of the eye. Most people over 50 have some amount, more or less, and in the great majority of cases they are not serious and carry no threat to vision. However, if extensive, cloud-like opacity occurs; it is best to consult an oculist.

P. C.:—What is the difference in food value between an ordinary glass of cow's milk and a glass of pasteurized milk?

Answer: None.

J. V.:—Can sinus drain into one's chest? What are the symptoms?

Answer: Chronic nasal infection frequently drains into the chest causing a generalized bronchitis with symptoms of cough, expectoration and frequent "colds."

Free Furnace Fume-Chek Assures Safety and Efficiency of Plant

Inquiries relative Stories and Advertising on this page should be sent to M. Jo Wintermute, Mansfield News-Journal. PHONE 4251-6

Service Available Through Courtesy of Allen Knapp

That furnaces should be checked periodically for safety's sake as well as an economy and efficiency measure is an established fact.

But prior to the recent discovery of FUME-CHEK by Allen Knapp of the Knapp Heating Company, 130 N. Walnut, the effectiveness of a check up was doubtful even after the furnace was torn down. The inconvenience caused by the discontinuance of the heating process during the check up was also a problem.

Now science and common sense have been combined to produce FUME-CHEK, a substance which, when deposited in the furnace, causes expansion of the gases within the heating plant. These will escape through any leak in the system and a distinguishing but pleasant odor will be noticed throughout the house, thus pointing the way to defects in the system.

During this procedure, operation of the furnace is not discontinued.

Mr. Knapp will FUME-CHEK your furnace without charge or obligation. Arrangements may be made by phoning 4406-6.

Then you will know whether there is danger of carbon monoxide poisoning . . . danger from fire . . . or whether you are wasting fuel because of the inefficience of your heating system.

Allen Knapp of the Knapp Heating company, 130 North Walnut street, is shown in the accompanying photo "Fume-Cheking" a furnace for safety and efficiency. This service is available free of charge without obligation. Just phone 4406-6.

SAFETY AWARD PRESENTED TO GAS COMPANY

Outstanding Record Boasts 1,889,438 Hours Without Disabling Accident.

Safety has always been a primary consideration of the Ohio Fuel Gas company.

The American Gas Association's Merit Award was presented to W. C. Mead, local manager of distribution department, district No. 5 of the Ohio Fuel Gas company at a company conference held in Columbus recently.

The local organization was one of five in Ohio to participate in the state award. Only other utility in America meriting this honor was the Oklahoma Natural Gas company.

The award was presented to Mead for outstanding achievement in accident prevention as indicated by the safety record of 170 employes working since June 8, 1936.

This record includes a total of 1,889,438 consecutive man hours without a disabling accident in operation of trucks, construction work, meter reading, maintenance of plants or among office employes.

Mead attributes this rare record to a set safety program coupled with constant supervision and vigilance by each local manager. He also attaches special importance to the fact that each department head is made directly responsible for the safety program of his particular department in the organization.

J. S. Cairns is chairman of the safety committee in this district which comprises Mansfield, Shelby, Ashland, Galion, Crestline, Willard, Marion, Bucyrus and more than 60 smaller communities in this area.

Third in Series of Ohio Public Service Demonstrations

Third in a series of Ohio Public Service sponsored "Health for Victory" demonstration classes was held in the Westinghouse auditorium yesterday.

The meetings, held monthly, are directed by Mrs. Irene Oberlin, home economist for Ohio Public Service, in conjunction with Myron D. Miller of the OPS official family and a specialist in dietetics.

The meeting yesterday, which featured a movie on problems of nutrition and a demonstration on the proper use of cooking utensils for the retention of vitamins, was attended by 75 women who prepare meals in the homes of defense workers.

The regular monthly demonstration will not be held in December, Mrs. Oberlin states, but monthly menu planning booklets will be mailed to those registered in the "Health for Victory" club.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, Nov. 22.

Sunday's horoscope holds augury of major events moving to sound but swift denouement, in which all the affairs of church, clergy, Sabbath conventions as well as the higher professions and avocations find firm basis, fortified by real inspiration or cultural stimuli. There may be peculiar and intriguing factors in this astral setup, calling for much discretion and good sense. It is a time for travel, change and renewal of contracts.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a very important and promising year which may bring many solid benefits and opportunities, as well as pleasant change, happy and lucrative contacts, travel, publicity and romance and fair fortune. Such combinations might, however, be imperiled by outbursts not guided by reason.

For Monday, Nov. 23.

Monday's astrological forecast is for sudden and unpredictable upheavals which may prove radical in significance to daily living. There may be danger in getting off to a false start in such new uprooting, which should be most carefully weighed and manipulated, lest there be dire results. Hew to the line of the old dependable and responsible in moments of dramatic excitement. Keep poised and calm.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for an unusual and unforseen uprooting, calling for the utmost poise, calm consideration and good judgment. The situation may be peculiar and abrupt, filled with dramatic episodes. But with proper management there may be surprising benefits and gratifications. If possible adhere to the old reliable persons, tactics and situations.

FILMSTRUCK

CHAPTER XXII

"It's a good picture, Schneider," he said softly.

"I know, but what can I do?" Schneider said helplessly, "Please, Charles, I have my troubles. Don't make things worse for me."

"They'll be worse, much worse," said the director pleasantly, "I am resigning from this studio as of this second unless you absolutely promise my picture will not be altered by one foot of film." Schneider leaned against his huge desk and groaned. He was suddenly furiously angry at Alice.

"Didn't I raise you from the gutter to be the biggest star in pictures?" he screamed. She lit a cigaret and blew the smoke into his face. His rebellion was short.

"The picture will be re-made?" whispered Alice. The silence was emphasized by the ticking of the clock on his desk—the clock had been a gift at a banquet honoring him for his achievements in the motion picture industry.

"It will be re-made," he said.

"Good-bye then," said Fordyce quietly.

Charles, you're a good director—one of the best I have. But Alice—"

Fordyce was genuinely sorry for the producer. He walked to the door. Then he turned. "I'm sorry to go. I like you, Hal, in spite of the no good so and so you married."

He closed the door without looking at Alice.

Livia and Fordyce lost their jobs on the same day.

Jack Tennant in the publicity department had called Livia at 9:30. Two syndicate columnists wanted to interview her, and she was to lunch with one and have tea with the other. She was planning what she would say to them when Charles telephoned.

"Get your hat. We're going to the beach after all," he said. She told him of her two appointments. "You don't have to worry about them," he said grimly. She did not understand.

"They'll say I'm temperamental if I'm not here," she protested.

"I'll be with you in ten minutes."

When Fordyce arrived, Livia said jubilantly, "You get everything you want. The office just called to cancel my interviews. That means I'm free to go."

"You certainly are free, lady," he said. Her smile faded at the tone of his voice. "You've been fired," he said, avoiding her eyes.

"It's not even a good joke," she replied.

"Come on, I'll explain in the car."

The sky was a deep blue, and the trees, flashing by, were greenly fresh and wet from the rain the night before. Livia thought how lovely California was outside; but inside everything was rotten and soft. It was bad enough to be fired for giving a good performance. But Charles—the only person in Hollywood who had cared enough to give her a break—had lost his job because of her.

"Take me to Mr. Schneider," she begged him. "I must explain. Alice hated me before I knew you. Please turn back now and take me to the studio. I won't let this happen to you."

He continued driving toward Santa Barbara. Fordyce was not worried, merely angry. He was a good director and could work in any studio in Hollywood. He had never bothered to count up on his investments, but he guessed he was worth about a million dollars. He would accept another job when he found a good story.

But what of Livia? He stopped the car along the Malibu highway and suddenly brought her body close against his and kissed her. Livia did not resist. She tried to obliterate Bruce from her mind.

She had come around to him finally, thought Fordyce. They all did sooner or later. Few had held out as long as Livia.

Cars were passing in a steady non-ending rush. It was Saturday and everybody was going somewhere in cars driven by raucous high school students or hired Negro chauffeurs—they were all going somewhere to have fun.

"And where am I going?" thought Livia, withdrawing a little from Charles' hard arms. But she was grateful. He had helped her, and was fired for his kindness. "I'll do anything he wants," she thought, and kissed him.

Some boys in a jalopy shouted at them. And they both laughed.

"We'll charge an admission fee," said Charles. "Ten cents to watch Fordyce and Clarkson in a world-record embrace."

She put back the hat that had fallen from her head and moved to her side of the car. He caught her fingers and kissed them.

"You're sweet," he said, and she smiled back confidently. Well, it was something to have an important man like Charles in love with her. But did he want to marry her? She would be wife number five. That made it less exciting somehow.

Charles was thinking they would lunch at Santa Barbara; then drive back. She had never seen his house. She would see it this evening.

They lunched at the Samarkand, and afterward, walked through the flower-filled gardens. Livia wanted to stay there. It was peaceful, and the air was full of sweet scents, and the salt of the sea. The heart-break and intrigue of Hollywood seemed continents away.

"From now on you are under personal contract to me," Charles said casually. "I'll pay you $150 as the studio did." It was quite usual in Hollywood for directors and agents to put promising players under personal contracts. But it was one more example of Charles' kindness to her, and one more link binding her to him.

The sun warmed their backs as they drove along the coastal route to his house in Beverly Hills.

Bruce was having a showdown with the Countess. In a trade paper that morning, on the same page reviewing Livia's picture, there was an announcement of the definite shelving of "Western Saga." He telephoned the Countess—at the time Livia and Charles were lunching at the Samarkand.

"But I don't understand," Saskia said. She was vague and fluttering, until Bruce said:

"I'm coming over to wring your little neck."

It was a long time since a man had called the Countess' neck little, or cared enough about it to want to wring it. And a pleasurable thrill passed through her bumpy body.

She received Bruce in her pink and grey Louis Quinze boudoir. The blinds were carefully arranged to dim the yellow sunshine. The air was heavy with the perfume Countess Saskia used.

"Do you mind," said Bruce after he had been in the room two minutes, "Do you mind if I open the windows? I can't breathe." Her face was faintly purple against the light, and Bruce regarded her with aversion.

"I've shown the film to some friends of mine, and they think it's awful," she said brutally.

"Who?" demanded Bruce.

"Oh, some bankers and people." The Countess stepped to the window, played with the blind cord, and gently lowered the blind. She had not meant to be brutal about the picture—until Bruce's cold objective eyes had made her want to scratch and claw.

"But," he burst out, "Bankers and people aren't the audience. Give it a proper trial in a theater. Show it to the press. This is my picture as well as yours. Or have you forgotten the small matter of a contract?"

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

FALSE-CARDING AN ART

Bridge is a game we hear a good deal regarding those learned men who make as certain exact principles for many things both in and out of this world. Some phases of bridge may be classed almost the same way, but the psychological part of it certainly cannot be. It's more of an art, something additional which depends upon sizing up the way a certain action will appear to your opponents or partner. This is especially so of false-carding, an art which is employed effectively among even the greatest of so-called experts.

	♠ K 6 ♥ Q J 9 6 2 ♦ 10 6 ♣ J 8 7 4
♠ J 9 4 3 ♥ K 5 ♦ J 9 4 ♣ A K 9 3	N W E S	♠ 8 2 ♥ 10 8 7 4 ♦ Q 8 2 ♣ Q 10 6 5
	♠ A Q 10 7 5 ♥ A 3 ♦ A K 7 5 3 ♣ 2

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♦	Pass	2 ♥	Pass
3 ♦	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

That bidding is only inserted to rationalize this deal, from a masters' pair championship, on which the actual play has been reported. West led the club K, the A was ruffed, the diamond A and K scored and then a third diamond led. Let's take now the play that could ensue. If that third diamond was ruffed with the spade 6, the spade K scored, heart 2 led to the A and the spade A and Q cashed, it is clear that West can get only one trump trick, in addition to the club K he already has and the heart K to come later. Playing thus South can make his contract.

But in the real game, when South led the second diamond, the K. East put on the Q. That caused South to ruff the third diamond with the dummy's spade K, and count on either an even division of trumps or a successful heart finesse. When both of these failed, he wound up losing two tricks to West's trumps, plus the club K and heart K, so was down one. That false-card by East put the blocks to South's hopes.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"I can give you my solemn assurance, my pledged word," he responded instantly, "that what I have to tell you now has danger in it only to me, and I am perfectly willing that your father and your husband should know about it. Later, when I can get in touch with a representative of your government without the peril of being branded as a spy, I want to tell them things I have discovered which are a danger to your country."

"That might be arranged," I said, thinking of my father in the next room, listening avidly to what he was saying. "My father has certain contacts with government officials which might enable him to grant your wish."

"I shall be glad if he can do that later," he said. "Just now I must talk only to you."

His voice now seemed familiar, and for the first time, I was sure he was the psuedo old man of the cafe.

Recognizes Georges.

"I do not know just how to tell you the most vital thing of all," he said.

"Would it help you, Georges," I asked, smiling at him, "if I told you that I know it already?"

For a full second he sat motionless, the eyes behind his thick, disguising glasses staring at me. Then with an almost convulsive movement he pulled off the glasses, put them on the table and fairly leaped to his feet. All pretense of feebleness was gone as he dropped to his knees beside me in gesture which I knew was, by reason of his training, as natural in him as his quickened breathing.

For his eyes were the well-remembered eyes of young Georges, exiled king of Trees, believed by most of the world to be dead, and on whose head a high price had been set by the few international conspirators who knew he was alive.

"Oh, Aunt Madge, Aunt Madge!" he exclaimed hoarsely, looking at me as might a man who had just received a last-minute reprieve from execution. He used the name which he and Noel had borrowed from Mary, in that old time when what Dicky called "our international romance" was in its first flowering. "You know me, and I do not have to pretend, to one friend, at least.

"I can't take off this horrible wig and beard," he went on. "They are meant to defy detection, and they are so artistically put on that it will take something like a surgical operation to remove them, if the time ever comes when I can resume my own identity."

His voice was so hopeless as he spoke the last words, that I could not let him go on without a bit of encouragement.

Gives Him Hope.

"That time will come, Georges," I said.

"I hope so," he said. "But at lease I can be rid of those awful glasses for a few minutes."

Then, as if he could no longer struggle against the current of emotion engulfing him, he clutched my hands, put his face down against them, and I heard one of the most frightening things in the world—the convulsive sobbing of a strong man, normally proud of his poise and his ability to stand anything without flinching, but who has been tortured, mentally or physically, beyond human endurance.

Stories and rumors flying back and forth between Massillon and Canton this week as the Washington high Tigers prepared to defend their seven-year-long state championship against the threat of McKinley's Bulldogs today, have been reminiscent of the early days of high school football when meetings of two strong rivals were always preceded by stories of treachery and dirty work at the crossroads.

There was one story this week that had all Massillon aroused. That one had it that Bill Edwards, former Western Reserve and Detroit Lions' coach, was helping Bup Rearick prepare the McKinley Bulldogs for their clash with the Tigers.

Now Edwards is a former Massillon high school star, and it has been no secret for these many years that Big Bill thought he should have had the Massillon coaching job when Paul Brown was appointed to that post.

And the fact that Edwards and Rearick were both teammates and roommates at Wittenberg made it all the easier for Massillon fans to believe the yarn. They were only partly mollified when Rearick said:

* * *

"If Edwards is in town, I haven't seen him." And Tiger tutor Elwood Kammer chimed in with: "I don't think Bill would do a thing like that."

Springfield high school's Wildcats, who will be seen in action on the Mansfield hardwood Feb. 9, open their cage season Monday, Nov. 30, against a faculty quintet.

This is usually a good test for the 'Cats as Springfield has many of its former star athletes in its teaching ranks.

Two football players, who have become well known to Mansfield fans in the past two years, are the only returning lettermen on the Wildcat squad. They are Dave Bundridge and Brooks Lawrence.

Shelby high school has met the problem of wartime transportation by cutting its basketball schedule to the bone.

The Whippets, in addition to their ten games in the N. C. O. league, have scheduled only one other tilt, that with nearby Crestline.

The Crestline game is booked at Shelby, so Coach Larry Swackhamer will have the transportation headache only once this winter.

Plaint of a High School Cage Coach Caught Away From Home, Out of Gas:

Show me the way to go home,
I'm tired and I want to go to bed,
My gas tank's dry as a dinosaur bone
And the buses are all off sked.
There are no trains for me.
This headache's mine alone,
Now you always hear me singing this song:
Show me the way to go home.

Canton Bulldogs Given 13 Points

MASSILLON —(INS)— The Massillon Tigers, traditional rivals of the Canton McKinley Bulldogs for half a century, were favorites to extend their victory streak to 53 in their clash with the Bulldogs today in Tiger stadium.

In spite of being the underdogs, Canton McKinley was given its best chance of toppling the rampaging Tigers since they last did the trick in 1934. Massillon football speculators have been giving Canton 13 points on even money wagers.

Approximately 22,000 fans were expected to crowd into Tiger stadium for the 47th session between the Bulldogs and the Tigers, with the all-time record of the teams' clashes standing at 22 to 21 in Canton's favor, and Massillon champing at the bit to square off the standings with the long-time rival.

"This is the opportunity we have been waiting for," Tiger Coach Elwood Kammer, a former Massillon star himself, declared.

Massillon has won seven straight over Canton McKinley, and since the Tigers have been enjoying their victory streak they have won 93 games out of 99, losing only four and tying two, while averaging six touchdowns a game in collecting 3,727 points to their opponent's 323.

COACH RESIGNS

SAN JOSE, Cal.—(INS)—Wilbur Hubbard, assistant football coach at the University of Rochester, Rochester, N. Y., since early this year, has resigned and will return to his old job at San Jose (Cal.) State college, it was disclosed today.

Buckeye Stadium Jammed

Largest Crowd of Grid Season Sees Big Game.

By RODGER NELSON

COLUMBUS —(INS)— Before the largest crowd of the collegiate gridiron season, Ohio State's once-beaten Buckeyes collide today with mighty Michigan in Ohio stadium. Some 76,000 witnesses are expected to jam the Buckeyes' horseshoe to see the Western conference championship aspirations of each team settled.

Michigan was an eleventh hour, 6-5, choice in the betting by virtue of the Wolverine's powerful 32-20 conquest of Notre Dame last Saturday and in view of the fact that Tommy James, Ohio's "game breaking" runner, can only see very limited service at the most because of a shoulder separation suffered in the Illinois game a week ago.

Coach Paul Brown, in his second year at the helm of the Buckeyes, stated that "James will only be used as a 'spot' runner, if we use him at all, but he definitely does not figure in our plans."

This throws a very heavy burden on the shoulders of George Slusser, 165-pound sophomore, who will be the first replacement for Paul Sarrmghaus at left half or Les Horvath at right half, necessitated by Bob Frye's broken leg and James' injury along with the disablement of two other lesser reserves.

The average fan, let alone the experts, dared not venture a prediction as to the outcome other than it would be a very high-scoring battle, and the team that was "on" would probably be returned the victor.

The success or failure of the Michigan team lies in the first eleven men's ability to stay in the game for 60 minutes because the Wolves are notoriously weak in matter of replacements, and in this the excellent physical condition of Ohio State was expected to become a major factor.

Michigan has a line of "iron men" attested by the fact that five of them played the entire 60 minutes against Notre Dame, as did two of the backs.

On paper, Michigan's first team seemed to rate a slight edge but when the substitutes are taken into consideration, the game once again reverts to a toss-up. Past performances never mean a thing, anyway, when these age-old rivals mix it up on the gridiron.

Victory for Ohio State will give the Bucks a clear cut Big Ten title, while a Michigan conquest will merely postpone the title-bearing tilt until next week when they play host to Iowa.

This will be the major test for these prospective All-Americans because the eyes and ears of the collegiate realm are focused right on Ohio stadium for this "game of the day."

* * *

The meeting, 39th between the two schools, will find Ohio State trying to score its first victory over a Fritz Crisler-coached team, the Bucks not having entered the win column over their arch-rivals since 1937. Last year's game, Paul Brown's first crack at Michigan, found the two teams battling to a 20-20 tie, so the Wolves will be seeking their first victory at the expense of the former high school coach.

Pep Captures Feather Title

Beats Chalky Wright For New York Crown.

By JACK MAHON

NEW YORK—(INS)—Wee Willie Pep, a pint-sized package of vitamin pills equipped with boxing gloves, holds New York's version of the world's featherweight championship today and if the plans of Promoter Mike Jacobs materialize will meet Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson, the national boxing association's 126-pound king, in his next title bout here in February.

Promoter Jacobs, extremely happy over a gross gate of $71,868.70 contributed by a mob of 19,521 citizens, as Pep, from Hartford, Conn., won a unanimous verdict over Chalky Wright of Los Angeles in fifteen in and out rounds at Madison Square Garden last night, said he was very confident of clearing up the 126-pound muddle by February.

Wilson and his manager, Jake Lakin, were in Pep's dressing room after he had stabbed, twisted and ran away from Wright to win an easy verdict over the much more experienced colored battler. Both were more than willing to agree to a match to determine the real featherweight king.

Pep's manager, Lou Viscusi, however, did not appear anxious to rush his charge "Boxing commissioner Frank Koskey of Connecticut said he was going to petition the N. B. A. to have Willie recognized as world's champion," said Lou, "and we'll wait till President Abe Greene decides on that before we consider any title matches. Pep is welling to fight anyone but we won't make any decisions for a couple of days because Willie has been fighting regularly and I think he deserves a rest."

After watching Willie (whose real name is Papaleo, and who used to be a bootblack) became the shining light in Promoter Jacobs optics we think his manager has the right idea.

* * *

Mr. Pep won himself a title on speed and cleverness. He was a decreasing favorite, when he entered the ring to seek his 54th straight triumph as a pro, having been quoted at 2-1 earlier in the week and being no better than an 11-10, or even money shot, at ring time.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Judging by the noise in the Garden last night, Willie Pep must be the biggest thing that's happened to the state of Connecticut since the Danbury fair closed down. . . . The out-of-town customers were a lot livelier than anything in the ring. . . . At that, Pep proved that you don't have to be as old as Chalky Wright to know a lot of boxing tricks. . . . By winning the featherweight title, Willie cleared the way for settlement of another of the disputed championships. . . . Manager Harry Burnkrant reports that Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson, the N. B. A. boss, will be ready for action about Dec. 15, which should be just in time to pull in another big crowd with Pep. There wasn't any crowd appeal in trying to settle a title dispute between Wright and Wilson. . . . And as Chalky remarked about his 40 per cent of that $72,000 gate last night . . . "That's nice compensation."

LITTLE BUT POWERFUL.

Marshall county, West Virginia (Pop. 3,500), will have two boys on the college all-star basketball squad that plays the Oshkosh, Wis., pros at Chicago next week. Rudy Baric of Benwood and Roger (Shorty) Hicks of Moundsville, both chosen for the all-stars, live eight miles apart, played on opposing high school teams, teamed together at West Virginia U. and now are co-coaches of the Mountaineer court squad since Coach Dyke Raese has gone into the navy.

Two Teams Boast Perfect Records

Boasting perfect records, the Sticklers and McClure's are tied for first place in the high school girls' Friday bowling league. McClure's scored a shutout over the Bonhams yesterday at Colony alleys, while the Sticklers were presented with a forfeit win.

Dorothy Norris had high total with 226 in two games, and also high game of 158.

MIXED PRICES PREDOMINATE ON MART LIST

Construction Contracts For 10 Months Exceed Any Previous Twelve.

(By Associated Press)

Those watching petroleum shares noted the action of the Texas railroad commission in authorizing daily average crude production in December of 1,470,658 barrels, or 120,258 barrels above the figure recommended by the Office of petroleum coordinator.

EXPECT 6,000 TO SEEK EXTRA GAS SUPPLIES

Rationing Officials See City Fall Short of First Registration Estimate.

apply for ration books. Auto club records show 22,000 licenses issued, an estimated 12,000 of these in Mansfield alone.

Meanwhile, as charges and counter-charges were exchanged by rebellious congressmen seeking to postpone tht Dec. 1 rationing date and William M. Jeffers, rubber administrator, the Richland gas rationing panel composed of W. J. Spreng as chairman, Emerson Weller and T. R. Sammons, furthered plans for the registration of supplemental applicants next week.

Volunteer workers, assigned to shifts serving from 1 to 5 p. m. and 6 to 9 p. m., under the direction of Paul English, will be at the registration station in the John Simpson Junior high school gymnasium at those hours Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday of next week and on Monday, Nov. 30.

Applicants will register in last-name groups as follows: A through C on Monday; D through G on Tuesday; H through L on Wednesday; M through Q on Friday; R through S on Saturday and T through Z on Monday, Nov. 30.

Chairman Spreng has directed volunteer registrants to report an hour before their regular shift schedule Monday for final instructions.

Complete or unchallenged applications will be acted on at once and the supplemental books issued at the time of application, Spreng has ruled. Contestable applications will be referred to a reviewing board and details of the final decision mailed to the applicant.

Tire inspectors will meet at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday in the ration board office, 43 North Mulberry street, to receive instructions from Chief Clerk Neff. Chairman Spreng and others associated with the gas rationing-tire inspection program. Inspectors will be sworn in by Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, defense coordinator.

Neff announced today that applications are still being received for tire inspector assignments. In war industries employing 100 or more workers the plant transportation committee will appoint an inspector to serve motorists employed at his particular plant.

Plant committees have been aiding applicants for supplemental gas rationing.

All motorists must submit their tires for inspection during December and A book holders repeat the process every four months. Holders of supplemental books must have tire inspections noted every 60 days.

FACES CHARGE

Mansfield Driver Accused of Blocking Traffic.

De Larcey Black, 40 Harmon avenue, will explain a charge of "unsafe operation" when he appears in traffic court Wednesday afternoon following an auto collision at Sixth and Mulberry streets last night.

According to Patrolmen Richard Hecht and Carl Beard, the Black auto unnecessarily blocked the progress of an auto driven by Leo P. Rachel, 123 Wolfe avenue, finally causing the crash. Black had been fined $150 and costs and his driving license suspended for one year when tried last March on the charge of leaving the scene of an accident. According to municipal court attaches he regained his driving rights by showing financial responsibility.

Mark J. Fink, 218 Marlowe road, told Hecht and Patrolman John Grohol early today that he apparently had been overcome by fatigue and was asleep at the wheel of his car when it rammed the parked auto of Ralph Boese, 217 Marion avenue. Fink was returning home from his night's work in a local plant.

Marion Woodruff, 641 Arlington avenue, and Alexander Duncan, Willoughby, escaped injury and their autos suffered little damage in a collision at Glessner avenue and Mulberry street.

Colorful Story.

Packing all the excitement of the 1880's and the color of the Gay Nineties into the film story of the life of James J. Corbett, heavy-weight boxing champion of the world, "Gentleman Jim," the Ohio attraction stars Errol Flynn in the title role. Corbett's rise in the boxing world after crashing an exclusive club and engaging in his first match is pictured and the film also reproduces the classic bout between Corbett and John L. Sullivan and the players include Alexis Smith, Alan Hale, and Jack Carson.

Exciting Mystery.

"The Glass Key," one of Dashiell Hammett's most exciting mysteries showing at the Madison, pairs Brian Donlevy and Veronica Lake in a story dealing with the efforts of a shady political boss to win the love of the blue-blood daughter of a man running for mayor on the reform ticket. Alan Ladd, Joseph Calleia and Bonita Granville are others in the cast. Broadway night spots furnish the background for "The Big Street," the second picture, featuring Lucille Ball and Henry Fonda.

Suspense Drama.

An old mansion that is literally falling apart furnishes the locale for "The Gay Sisters," Ritz attraction featuring Barbara Stanwyck, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Nancy Coleman and George Brent. A trace of suspicion hovers over the mansion and the three sisters living therein although the secret of the house is held by a civil engineer who wants the house for his own. Gig Young, a new player, and Gene Lockhart are in the cast. Wallace Ford in "Inside the Law," is the co-feature.

War Thriller.

At the risk of their lives Russian cameramen have caught the intensity and the fury with which the Red army drove back the Germans in the last winter's conflict in the Park atraction. "Moscow Strikes Back," opening tomorrow. The picture however covers more than just the battle front. It depicts the home defenses and the guerrilla activities behind the lines. Edward G. Robinson acts as narrator for the production and Dimitri Tiomkin arranged the musical score. Lupe Velez and Leon Errol in "Mexican Spitfire Sees a Ghost," shares the bill.

Two Ohio Hunters Killed, One Hurt Near Loudonville

were Richard Key, 12, of near Marion, killed by the blast of a shotgun in the hands of his companion, Jack Lehner, 14, and Loren Miller, 13, of Kidron, Wayne county, shot fatally while he was setting traps with a young friend. The bullet was fired accidentally from a .22 caliber rifle held by the Miller youth's companion.

At Loudonville Earl Miller, 30, who was shot in the knee by his hunting companion, Richard Armstrong 19, while hunting on the Armstrong farm. Miller was taken to the Samaritan hospital where his condition was reported fair.

Armstrong told Sheriff L. D. Hammond of Ashland county that he had pointed his gun at his dog trying to prove to Miller that the dog was not gun-shy. The supposedly empty gun wounded Miller in the knee as he stepped back to watch the experiment.

At Wadsworth, Mrs. Wade Richardson, 39, was struck in the face by shot pellets from a hunter's gun. Robert Bindley, 14, Marion, lost an eye when stray pellets struck him in the face. Also injured was Raymond James, 12, Summit county, shot in the leg.

A number of Seneca county hunters wore steel helmets of the First World War as they sought the daily bag limit of two cock pheasants or a brace of ruffled grouse and four rabbits.

A doe, frightened into the city of Youngstown by the guns of hunters, died of exhaustion after being chased by dogs.

The influx of Michigan nimrods was so heavy at Fremont that the county clerk ran out of forms for non-residents and advised applicants to try other county seats.

The killer whale will attack much larger species and even boats and small ships.
